On Foot in North Lesvos Update 2010

This leaflet covers changes on the ground between October 2002 and October 2009 plus a few corrections and clarifications to the original text. It replaces the printed leaflet 'Update 2009' and 'Stop Press 2009' on www.lesvoswalks.net

General: New green fingerposts have appeared at track junctions throughout Lesvos. As well as the obvious places, Eftalou, Argenos, etc., a number point down tracks I know to be dead ends, and to places (probably shrines or farms) unfamiliar to me and others I have spoken to.

Walk 1, page 3, para 2: The street signs for ΟΔΟΣ ΚΑΣΤΡΟΥ & ΟΔΟΣ ΑΡΓΥΡΗ ΕΦΤΑΛΙΩΤΗ have been removed. There is a new brown sign ΚΑΣΤΡΟ at the first junction.

page 3, para 3: The main drain across the Dapia has been replaced as part of major works to improve Mithimna's drainage system, and this has led to some disruption in the area. The path down to the ruined mill has been blocked by a fence. To reach the fields, cliffs, and archaeological remains beyond it is now necessary to go sharp left at the electricity pole and follow a small path across to a gate down into the street. Turn right into the street, follow it round to the left, and then turn right into the car-park. At the far end of the car-park a path leads across to the mill.

Walk 2, page 7, para 3: The stone barn has been extended into a new house.

Walk 3, page 8: There are new signs to the horse track (ΠΡΟΣ ΙΠΠΟΔΡΟΜΟ), with white lettering on a blue background, at the beginning of the walk by the farmers' co-operative olive factory, and at junctions along the way.

page 8, last para: There are now two tracks leading into the municipal tip. Also the track between the tip and Camping Mithimna has been straightened, leaving parts of the old route leading to dead ends and occasional precipices. To avoid these, keep to the main track leading down hill.

Walk 4, page 10, para 2: I found this gate locked in October 2008, though it has since been open again. There is a low fence to the right of the gate that is easily scaled.

para 4: This farmyard is now fenced along the top of the bank. There is a small path leading to a gate in the right-hand corner.

Walk 5, page 11, para 4: The track has now been extended into the valley. Follow it, keeping right where it forks after about 70 metres, until it begins to level out. Twenty metres before it bends right at a small tree go left on to a faint path.

The lower part of the path is overgrown in places - you may not find the water-trough and sheep-fold. Don't panic - continue until you come to the olive & fig trees.

page 12, para 4: There may be a brushwood barrier at the olive grove boundary with the river bank.

page 12, para 5: A new concrete track has disrupted the riverside path. Now follow the riverbed, ignoring the track to the left, until you reach the concrete road. The gate has been removed.

last para: Both the Restaurant Tsipouri signs have been removed. (The restaurant is still open during the holiday season; its entrance is now on the tarmac road going left from the fork). After the fork, the fields are gradually being replaced by new houses and a large group of polytunnel greenhouses.

Walk 6, page 14, para 2: The track on the far side of the river has been widened to improve access to a small garden centre, and this seems to have caused some confusion. To clarify; after climbing the river bank keep left uphill on the track, leaving the houses and garden centre on your left. You will meet the Molivos-Vafios road just after the brow of the hill.

para 3: There are now no signs at the entrance to this track, but it is fenced and unmistakable.

A large new house has been built around the chapel; several other new houses are going up on plots to the right of the path.

Walk 7, page 16, paras 5 to page 17, para 1: The track leading from the Molivos-Vafios road past the reservoir to Petra (used by walks 7, 12 & 13) has now been widened and asphalted throughout its length, except for the steep hill at the half-way point past what used to be the double ponds. Possibly nobody has yet decided how to get down this hill. I am told that this is intended as a relief road during the regular winter cliff falls on the coast road above Petra harbour.

Walk 8, page 19, para 3: The dirt road to the municipal tip has been re-aligned to cut out the final right-hand hairpin. Otherwise there is no significant change here, except that there are now two entrances to the tip, part of an attempt to segregate and recycle various types of rubbish.

para 4: The brushwood gate has been removed. Go through the remaining gate and bear right into the field.

para 7: The road into Vafios is becoming busier. To avoid it cross the road and take the track diagonally off to the left (now with a green fingerpost ΣΤΑΥΡΟΥΛΑ-ΒΑΦΕΙΟΣ) and follow it uphill for about five minutes to a fork. Go downhill to the right (signed ΒΑΦΕΙΟΣ) and in another ten minutes fork right again. This track leads steeply downhill and in five minutes meets the top of the concrete road into the village (page 21, para 2). Turn left along the paved street into the village.

Walk 9, page 23, para 1: A new track has been driven up the lower part of the hillside, starting about 20 metres downstream from the previous crossing. (It is clearly visible across the valley as you walk down towards the farm) To reach it, go between the farm buildings and the stream and continue across the farmyard. Follow the track up the hill, ignoring the branch to the left running along the hillside. The track currently ends at the first ridge, where a field has been fenced. At the brow of the hill there is a minutes to where it bends left to cross the stream (there is a sign to Άϊ Άϊία at this point) and then right by the tree with the old blue cross waymark. There should be a fingerpost at this point - follow the sign to KPHTA.

In less than five minutes the track doubles back across the stream - go straight ahead along the path signposted to KPHTA. Where the path leaves the track stay on the left of the stream bed. Since it was made the course of the stream has changed with winter torrents and you may have to pick your way over boulders. Part way along this path the red waymarks end, but in ten minutes it rejoins the track. Turn left uphill on the track, follow it round to the right, and the Turkish fountain (para 5) is on the right at the next left-hand bend (this is Κρήτα). Then continue from the top of page 62.

page 62, para 4: The gate and warning signs at the top of the track have been removed - there is now no obstacle to getting to the summit of Vigla. The communications post seems to have been re-designated a fire lookout point, though I surprised a national-service man asleep in there in 2007.

Walk 26, page 63, Sikaminea to Lepetymnos: This trail has now been marked for its whole length with fingerposts and red square/ diamond waymarks.

page 64, paras 2-4: New brushwood barriers have made it necessary to reroute this section, as follows: 'The path leads back into trees and descends again. It bends round to the right and climbs on kalderimi. Go through a gate and bear left, with the entrance to an olive grove straight ahead. Climb steeply over a brow and down again with a wall on the right. In five minutes, continue ahead onto an overgrown path along a terrace wall. After two minutes bear right past a fallen tree and continue along the path with steep terracing down on the right towards the sea.

In another five minutes, by an entrance on the left over a fallen wall into an olive grove, go straight ahead along an overgrown kalderimi running between walls. (There may be a firmly closed gate across the path at this point in spite of the red waymark on the tree to the left. If necessary, climb over. Don't be misled by the apparently well-trodden path into the olive grove on the left: this leads to a maze of sheep-paths, the lowest of which runs more or less parallel to the trail: even if you manage to find the right one, at the end you will still have to climb another gate to regain the trail) Bear right and continue slightly uphill. Go along the path as it reverts to kalderimi leading down and across a stream, then bending right under a high stone wall on the other side (This last section has become very overgrown) It finally bends left and climbs twenty metres to join a dirt road by a small trekking trail sign'

page 65, para 2: The power line has been being renewed and rerouted, but not enough to affect the instructions.

para 4: This trekking trail sign has been removed.

page 66, para 3: There is now a crash barrier along this stretch of road, with a gap and fingerpost where the path starts. Note that the path runs alongside the road for about 20 metres before turning downhill - do not take the apparent path leading straight down from the sign.

The sign on the electricity pole has disappeared (there are various new signs around the village indicating the 'road' route to Ag. Alexandros)

para 3: Ignore the new track forking down to the right just after the monastery, unless you want an extra ten minute walk to a promontory with views over towards Skoutaros. The water supply to this fountain has now been disconnected.

(For a new route through the valley to the Skoutaros-Anaxos road see my website)

para 4: The 'Ecological Route' sign has disappeared.

para 5, line 1: There is a new sign here to Εἰσοδέπιά - Lafiona.

The sign at the next fork has been corrected with a taped arrow pointing right to Ag Alexandros.

Walk 24, page 57, para 5: In October 2009 the 'Private Road' sign had been removed and the gate was open.

Walk 25, page 58, para 2: For an alternative start to this walk turn off the main road through Anaxos opposite Studios Anessis down the tarmac street next to a partly-built apartment block. (This is the last street in the village going towards Skoutaros). In about five minutes keep left at the fork (the right fork becomes a river bed and leads under several low bridges before coming out on the beach). Carry straight on along the concrete lane, ignoring a turning on the left, and where the lane ends, with a small-holding on the right, continue on the path ahead (do not go left into the olive grove) In a couple of minutes keep left at the junction of two paths, and rejoin the walk at page 58 para 3.

page 59, last para: The road from Ambelia to Anaxos is now either tarmac or concrete throughout its entire length.

Walk 26: Since I last updated this walk the track which was being bulldozed through the valley has been completed. It now runs from the main road between Argenos and Lepetimnos shortly after the spring (there is a green fingerpost to ΑΓ ANNA) and finally joins the dirt road leading to the summit of Vigla.

Also the Commune of Lepetimnos has cleared, signposted and waymarked a series of trails in the area, including most of those used in the lower reaches of this walk.

(For a new route from Sikaminia to Ay Avva using these paths see my website)

page 60, last para: This area is being tidied and 'improved' with a new wall and steps. A restored Turkish fountain has been imported and installed with an impressive working tap. To follow the walk turn left at the top of the steps and go along in front of the fountain.

page 61, para 1: The yellow trekking trail waymark has been replaced with a red square. After about five minutes turn left on to the new track and follow it for ten rows of small trees to the left - take the path that runs alongside and immediately before them.

Most of the water pipe has now been removed.

para 5: 10 metres beyond the gate a rough track has now been bulldozed down to meet the top of the existing track.

page 24, para 1: The field has been fenced along the full length of its boundary with the road. There is one small gap (with a brushwood barrier) in the middle of a holly-oak thicket directly opposite the bottom of the track.

(NB If you are walking this route from the Vafios end, swing right uphill towards the small ridge after coming through this gap. It is all too easy to follow apparent paths and hit the river at the top of a cliff several hundred metres too far downstream)

para 3: The beginning of this track is now directly opposite one on the right signposted ΣΤΥΨΗ 5ΚΛΜ.

Walk 10, page 25, para 3: Shortly below the beginning of the path a new track has been bulldozed, obliterating a section. Turn left on to the track (this is the second track, the first runs down to a metal gate), follow round the right-hand bend and climb for 5 minutes until a short spur joins acutely from the right. The path resumes a few metres down here on the left. There are now new blue way marks on this section.

Walk 11, page 26, Introduction: I understand that Fr Ignatius is no longer at Ypsilometopo. I do not know whether his replacement is continuing his custom of welcoming visitors.

page 30, para 1: Halfway down the hill there is a new dirt road off to the left (signposted ΚΑΛΛΟΝΗ) This runs along the hillside above Stipsi and leads to the junction in Walk 16, page 41, para 2.

Walk 12: Valley of the Mills. The Municipality of Petra recognises the historic interest of this valley, and has finally begun work to encourage visitors: one of the lower mills has been partly restored and information boards, finger-posts, and waymarks (red squares or diamonds) erected. A marked trail starts from Petra sea-front (near the football ground), leads through the lower part of the valley and finishes at Petri. There are now two marked walks through the valley in addition to mine - the Petra Municipality's and one marked by Akti Travel of Molivos with blue paint. Inevitably they all overlap in places, but if you are trying to follow my walk rely on my description, not the marks.

page 31, para 2 (also Walk 13, page 34, para 2): The track here has been realigned to run below the ponds. (in preparation for paving, see update for Walk 7) Coming from Molivos turn left uphill and take the track through the gate on the right.

para 3: Shortly after the second gate there is a new track down to the right: keep on the upper track.

para 5: Near the top of the concrete stretch of track a newly cleared path leads diagonally up to the left. There is a signpost to 'ΑΝΩ ΛΙΓΩΝΑ' at the bottom of the path. This leads past the top of the mill and rejoins the walking route, so is an alternative to continuing on the track along the valley.

page 32, para 2: The gate has been removed.

paras 2-3: There seems to have been some confusion here: to clarify, the path leads uphill to the left immediately before (ie to the left of) the cistern.

para 5: There is now a double-headed blue arrow on a flat rock marking the beginning of the path down to Petri.

last para: This post and the way marks have now completely disappeared. For Petri take the path down into the valley starting to the left of the large triangular outcrop in the shape of a shark's fin.

(At this point a path comes in from Vafios.

For details see New Routes 2 - Vafios to Petri via Άνω Λιγώνα at www.lesvoswalks.net)

page 33, para 1: The collapsed tree has now been removed, revealing yet more ruins.

para 3: The brushwood barrier across the stream has been removed.

para 4: Where the stream divides follow the right-hand channel (previously this was the obvious route, but it has been obscured by fallen trees) or for easier walking climb on to its left-hand bank. Almost immediately go through a gap in a wall towards the animal shed.

(If you come across a much larger shed surrounded by a network of wiremesh fences you have followed the wrong channel)

Walk 13, page 34, para 2: Shortly after the second gate there is a new track down to the right. Both tracks lead to the chapel.

para 3: There is now a wooden footbridge across the riverbed.

para 4: The grassy track has been widened, and is no longer grassy. Now, where you meet the kalderimi leading ahead, bear left slightly uphill through a gate.

para 5: There are now five gates on this stretch of track. The final one defeated even me; fortunately there is an easily climbed wall to the right of the gate.

para 4: There is now a difficult-looking gate on the rock-face. However it opens easily by lifting the post on the left towards you. Immediately afterwards go right downhill for a few metres and then left into the olive grove. Follow along the terraces to join the road - there are now several easy ways up the bank.

The rubbish tip has been closed and re-located further down the road towards Petra. The old site has been earthed over and is no longer noticeable.

Walk 15: page 39, para 2: Be sure to continue on the path downhill as far as the stream. Ignore any waymarks indicating a path to the right.

Walk 16, page 40, para 3: There is now a gate across the track at the right-hand bend. As a result, if you are coming from Stipsi it is very easy to miss the turn and continue straight ahead on the more obvious, but dead end, track. Be careful to look out for the gate - there is a sign (November 2009), in English 'Please shut the Door'

page 41, para 1: Harald Haugli, a reader who has done this walk with an altimeter, tells me that this is not the summit of Roussa, which in fact is about 83m (270') higher and 1km further east. His instructions to get there (which I have not yet tried) are:- "It is easy to get there, there are plenty of animal tracks going in the right direction and a concrete post marks the summit. Curve back above the main antenna using what you can find. Then go through a gate in the stone wall to your right. After that it is just to aim for the top of the hill (or the post if you can spot it), keeping the wall fairly close on your left where the animal tracks are easiest for walking"

Walk 17, page 43, first line: A new hand-painted sign to Eftalou has appeared, pointing right through a gap in the wall on to the drive from the new development. Following this will lead you on to the track past the Pension Taverna Orpheus (page 44, para 4). If you want to follow the coastline, stay with the instructions in the book.

para 2: Take care when crossing this fence and the land beyond not to disturb the fences or any animals. The farmer is not walker-friendly and there have been several altercations reported to me.

page 44, para 4: Both the Restaurant Tsipouri signs have been removed. (The restaurant is still open; its entrance is now on the tarmac road going left from the fork). After the fork, the fields are gradually being replaced by new houses and a large group of polytunnel greenhouses. The rear entrance to Orpheus has now been closed and the sign removed.

Walk 18, page 46, para 2: The millstones have gone.

Walk 20: page 50, para 2: Take care not to miss this right turn; the bottom of the track is becoming overgrown. It is opposite the steel/wire mesh gate of a fenced olive grove. para 3: Immediately before the first house on the left a short track has been bulldozed up to the left. This leads directly to the square, next to the school, with the Taverna TO AIOPION immediately to the right, making a useful short cut if you are desperate for a beer after the climb.

Walk 21, page 51, para 2, line 10: For a short cut avoiding most of the bypass; about five minutes along the lane there is a staggered crossroad with signs to 'Center' and 'Anaxos'. Turn left here, walk up to the bypass and turn right. The track to Lafionas is about 40m on the left, just after a large new pale blue agricultural building.

para 3: A new track has been opened up into an olive grove. Coming from Anaxos the track to Lafionas is now the third on the right.

page 52, last para: There is a large new water-trough shortly before the junction.
